WISCONSIN -12.5 at Rutgers

Badgers finally playing football like everyone thought they would at the start of this season, just been a long road to get here. Rutgers woes on offense continue as they were dire straights in their win vs Illinois last time out and now have to face a Wisconsin defense that will dominate both lines of scrimmage while displaying their new found rushing game more often than not when attacking on offense. After a stumbling start Wisconsin is once again in the drivers seat to get into the Big 10 championship game that will likely be determined when they meet Minnesota later this year. BADGERS always have played well as road favorites (15-5 ATS) last 20 and an even better 10-2 ATS as road favorites facing teams with a losing mark. What gets us excited about Wisconsin this week is that DEFENSE which is allowing 215 yards per game and a miniscule 1.7 yards per rush, while on OFFENSE its Wisconsin holding all the potent edges with a ground game that is now putting up 261 yards per game and 5 yards per carry. Combine that with the Scarlett Knights inability to do much at home and you have a blowout waiting in the wings. RUTGERS 0-3 L7, but 4-10 last 14 at home that includes a streak of 0-4 and 1-6 ATS as home dogs. Can Rutgers win this, doubt it, as their home mark suggests nothing but futility at 1-46 OUTRIGHT in their last 47 home games as a double digit dog. Last time these two collided Wisconsin displayed the Badgers crushing ground game picking up a 317-72 rushing edge, and in fact, Wisconsin has tallied 30 or more points last 3 meetings. Teams heading in opposite directions right now and when you consider that in the last 4 games heading into this contests, Rutgers has been allowing 30 pts per game average and 458 yards on defense suggesting again another blowout win for Wisconsin here. BADGERS 38- 10

TOP PLAYS

NFL this week is one of those times where several teams are coming into this weeks contests topping the charts and makes selecting one as a top play quite a tedious task. One thing for sure who the hell needs a spread in the NFL as again, OUTRIGHT WINNERS LAST WEEK ROLLED TO 14-1 ATS, with the only weak link KC beating the Giants on Monday Night but failing to cover the spread. Despite that knowledge, its still very hard to figure out which teams will show up and play accordingly. With so many distractions, one better be prepared for the Sunday wars.

While TENNESSEE looks good on paper, how good will they actually be with no HENRY totting the pig, or how CLEVELAND will handle a big distraction of BECKHAM now being released? Will GIANTS players be allowed to play, including Barkley after so many tested FALSE

POSITIVE for the virus? DO NOT FORGET THAT THIS WEEKEND WE ALL TURN BACK TIME AND PUSH THE CLOCK BACK ONE HOUR as darkness falls a little quicker into nightfall. So let me delve into this weeks NFL SELECTION CHARTS and make a choice for TOP PLAY OF THE WEEK - and the winner is

LA CHARGERS -1 at Philadelphia

Chargers coming into this one off a very tough home loss to the surging PATRIOTS as their "D" just could not stop that game ending drive that ran out the clock, now travel to the EAGLES who come off a dusting of the paper LIONS who couldn't punch their way out of well, a paper bag. CHARGERS have gone a very good 13-3 on the road vs the NFC East and come into this 24-9 ATS on the road off a home loss as favorite. Should be noted that TEAMS (+3 to -3) off a game where they allowed 6 points or less vs an opponent off a loss of 3 or less now stands at 11-34 ATS suggesting a play on the CHARGERS, as the Eagles fall into that bad trending situation. EAGLES also 3-10 last 123 vs the AFC are 3-10 ATS last 13 as home dogs of +7 or less when facing a non divisional team., not withstanding that the EAGLES are also 1-7 last 8 vs the AFC at home. Another super trend SUGGEST to play against any NFL TEAM that comes into this weeks game off a 40 point outburst and is now 0-8 ATS in the following contest and not that it plays into anything significant, Chargers are now 3-0 in the state of PENNSYLVANIA over the last decade ending a previous 1-17 drought. Eagles passing yards of 663 in their last 4 games are the fewest in club history since 2005 when Mike McMahon subbed in for QB McNabb. Will the Chargers implement more of a ground game this week? Hope so, while the Chargers rush the ball only 1/3rd of the time overall, they how face an Eagles "D" that is 24th vs the run, keep in mind that when the Chargers do run the ball they average 4.6 yards per carry, 4th best in the NFL. Finally to wrap this up LA now 8-2-1 ATS last 11 on road vs teams with a losing home record -- 8-3 ATS last 11 overall --- 5-2 ATS last 7 as favorite --- 4-1 ATS last 5 road games.

PHILADELPHIA 3-10 ATS after allowing 15 or less points --- 2-5 ATS last 7 off a win --- 2-5 ATS off a win of 14 or more --- 2-8 ATS last 10 off a spread win. SAN DIEGO 30-24

OTHER GAMES I MENTIONED that were in the mix for the top spot this week are - not in any particular order.

BALTIMORE -5.5 vs Vikings

Vikings 2-7 last 9 ATS off a spread loss --- 3-11 ATS last 14 overall -- 1-10 ATS on field turf --- RAVENS 4-0 ATS off spread loss --- 6-0 ATS last 6 vs teams with losing road record --- 4-1 ATS last 5 off outright loss

PITTSBURGH -6.5 vs Chicago (Monday Night)

despite Pittsburgh 0-6 ATS as home favorites lately - CHICAGO 1-4 ATS last 5 as road dog --- 1-4 ATS overall on road --- 2-6 ATS vs teams win winning records --- 3-7 ATS last 10 overall --- 1-7 last 8 as underdogs --- 1-9 ATS last 10 vs teams with a winning home mark --- 0-5 ATS last 5 overall coming in off allowing 350 yards or more

NO WASHINGTON this week in the NFL so our go against trend takes a week off after another win last week in Denver. Damn
